Personal statements about myself:

I am an Infectious Diseases physician who is passionate about developing and supporting the younger generation of doctors in the field of infection. I have taken every opportunity to professionally develop over the past 30 years through involvement with healthcare delivery and research. I have formed a large network of colleagues in Ireland and internationally which has been essential in my career development. I believe in the importance of mentorship and advocacy as a means of me giving back for all the professional opportunities afforded to me during my career.
